Alice Walker's early story, "Everyday Use," has remained a cornerstone of her work. Her use of quilting as a metaphor for the creative legacy that African Americans inherited from their maternal ancestors changed the way we define art, women's culture, and African American lives. Alice Walker (born February 9, 1944) is an American novelist, short story writer, poet, and activist. She wrote the novel The Color Purple (1982), for which she won the National Book Award for hardcover fiction, and the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction. Alice Walker uses craft moves like poor grammar, colloquial language, and short sentences. The grammar that the characters use expresses how functionally illiterate people were back then, even at an older age. "I ast our new mammy bout Shug Avery". Sentences like these show the lack of grammatical education.
