The advance of economic globalization has led many academics, policy-makers, and activists to warn that it leads to a 'race to the bottom'. In a world increasingly free of restrictions on trade and capital flows, developing nations that cut public services are risking detrimental effects to the populace. Western people have, over the past three centuries, confidently applied their own understandings and forms of organisation to the rest of the world. However, the right to say whatever we like is tempered by the Human Rights Act, which makes it an offence to express opinions that could be deemed to be 'threatening, abusive, or insulting' on the grounds of 'colour, race, or ethnic or national origins'.
