The Girl at the Lion d'Or was edited by Richard Cohen for Hutchinson. It was the first book that was sold for Faulks by a literary agent: Gillon Aitken of Aitken Alexander Associates, of whom Faulks is still a client. The Girl at the Lion d'Or by Sebastian Faulks, was the author's second novel. Set in the tiny French village of Janvilliers in 1936. Together with Birdsong and Charlotte Gray, it makes up Faulks' France Trilogy. I have heard of Sebastian Faulks, many times. This is the first of his works that I have read. I am in love sigh. The Girl at the Lion D'Or is a love story; but it is also so much more. THE GIRL AT THE LION D'OR is a fast moving, enticing love story that gives readers just enough sentimentality to compliment the dramatic plot. Faulks is a true master of the language and his style evokes the complicated, tenuous mood of the novel. Thus, with each purposeful word, Faulks not only entwines his readers into the life of his story, but also leaves them wishing the story would go on indefinitely.
